Reasons for comment:

Comments: The village already struggles with electricity supply issues. With over 100 new houses planned, it's essential that these properties include solar panels to help generate their own power and reduce pressure on the grid.

While outages are not as frequent as they once were, they still happen regularly. I work in the village and see first-hand the disruption they cause. The current infrastructure is already under strain, and it's difficult to see how it would cope with the additional demand from so many new homes.

Without proper planning and investment in sustainable energy solutions, the added load on the power lines is likely to create further problems for existing residents and businesses.

Kind regards
