Reasons for comment:
Comments:	I would like to express my support for this planning application. As someone who lives in a neighbouring town and has four children, I understand how difficult it has become for families to find well-designed homes in attractive village communities. Developments like this help provide opportunities for people to put down roots in places such as Ansty, which I see as a positive thing.

Having looked through the revised plans, I think the proposal has been carefully considered. It appears to complement the existing development rather than compete with it, creating a cohesive extension that respects the character of the village. The range of house types is also encouraging, as it should appeal to a mix of households rather than just one type of buyer.

One aspect I particularly like is that this is not a large, sprawling development. It is a measured and proportionate addition to the village, making good use of land that sits naturally alongside existing homes. To me, this feels like the sort of gradual growth that allows villages to evolve without losing their identity.

There will always be differing opinions on new housing, but I believe schemes should be judged on their quality and suitability. In this case, I feel the revised proposal has been thoughtfully designed and would make a positive contribution to Ansty, bringing new households into the community while remaining sympathetic to its surroundings.

For those reasons, I hope the application is approved.

Kind regards
