Dear Anna Tidey,

We recently submitted a comment on the above application, having ticked the “objection” option.

We tried to make it clear in the comment that we have no objection in principle to the planned extension, but we were a little concerned at the appearance of the front elevation in the architect’s drawing. The drawing gives the impression that the whole of the front of the house will be finished in brickwork. I suspect this is just a draft projection as the first storey of the present house, as well as the adjoining half of the semi (and all the other houses in Meadow Drive) are Sussex Tile-hung. In conversation with Mr and Mrs Duffy, the occupiers, it is clear that they expect the final version to have tiles

Our second comment concerns the front elevation of the extension. Other properties in Meadow Drive that are semi-detached and which have extensions to the side have the extensions set back from the front elevation. We would have expected the same to be done in this case, and this would be our preference.

Our phone number is [REDACTED] and we would be happy if you wish to discuss this further.

Yours sincerely
