Reasons for comment:
Comments:	The area is already too trafficked near the station, and this new Aldi will only add to congestion and not add to the approach into Hayward's Heath for visitors from the station. I do not see a valid reason why an area perfect for commuter housing should be a supermarket, when there are already 2 large supermarkets a stone's throw away. The area is also adjacent to a park and green space, which would be impacted by adding a supermarket and large car park.

Aldi should consider placing the supermarket near new home developments to better service the community in Haywards Heath, where traffic is less (for example around Rocky Road). Haywards Heath infrastructure is already stretched, and the traffic on the Broadway and near the station should not be added to.

Kind regards
