Reasons for comment:
Comments:	Farmland once built on can rarely be recovered for farmland usage; With the flooding of so much of our farmland throughout England we need all the farmland we have to produce food for the UK population. A lot of the increasing flooding is caused by the inability of the water to drain away because the land has been built on, concrete absorbs nothing. So many floodplains have been built on with scant regard to the draining of excess rain and othre precipitation. We have lovely countryside for walking, exercising dogs etc. already in existence and so the providing of a "country park" is totally unnecessary. Please, please reject these planning applications.

Kind regards
