Reasons for comment:
Comments:	The recent replacement of the timber cladding to the front elevation has significantly improved the appearance of the house. The work seems to have been carefully considered with a view to enhancing the building and making it more energy efficient, whilst ensuring the appearance is sympathetic to the overall appearance of the building and in keeping with surrounding conservation area. The inclusion of newly made ornate metalwork on the windowsills has helped restore the look of that elevation (previously some had been missing). Parking on this section of the High Street is very limited and consequently cars are often parked causing obstruction to the road, meaning that this section effectively becomes single lane traffic only. The building of a car port in the garden of Home Cottage is likely to improve this situation with minimal or no impact to the surrounding properties. Considering that it is a four-bedroom family house, this seems entirely reasonable.

Kind regards
