Dear Hamish,

All good thanks you - certainly tasty!

We have asked the firm to comment on the attached and they have answered as such:

The process of drilling will take approximately one week using a drilling rig, which is powered by diesel. When it is operating (standard hours of operation being 9am-5pm) the noise and vibration are negligible and similar to a standard generator. Once the borehole itself is operational, the noise from the small submersible pump will be none existent as it is situated underground inside the well.

Thank you,

Rich
